Risks & Liability

Farm animals may carry a number of infections that can be harmful to people. Whilst every effort will be made to minimise these risks, we request that visitors Elysian read the HM Government guidelines on "Avoiding Infection on Farm Visits" (copy in our office and available online) and thoroughly wash their hands at the end of the session. Although working with animals in a therapeutic setting has many benefits it should be remembered that animals are unpredictable. Animals like humans have their own moods that determine their level of desire to interact with others. No animal will be forced to participate in sessions should one of our staff determine the animal to be reluctant.

Our site is a 'real farm', and there are risks associated with being outside in a farm environment, and being with such close encounters and interaction with animals. There are also areas of significantly uneven ground, muddy areas, wired and electrified fencing. We ask you to watch your step and be mindful that animals can push, bite, kick and scratch, and visitors are asked to adhere to risk assessments and ground rules put in place by Elysian staff, as well as national guidelines for visiting farms (available in our site office). Should any persons accessing the farm site and/or provisions at Elysian become aggressive towards one of our staff and/or animals we reserve the right to determine whether or not it is appropriate to continue with the sessions/placement.
